Inhale Halpruner's for Colds.

CURES HIS COLD INSTANTLY

How a San Franciscan Keeps From Having a Cold.

The following letter from Mr. F. T. B. Mann explains how he breaks up a cold as soon as he feels the first symptoms:

"In the interest of those who are suffering from colds, neuralgia, lagrippe I want to say that I have used Dr. Halpruner's Wonderful Pain Remover with most excellent results.

"I went to New York in October, 1900, and while there caught a severe attack of la grippe. After suffering for several weeks I returned to California, believing that the change of climate would cure me. It was a hard trip out in the train and I suffered more than ever and arrived in San Francisco a very sick man. I purchased a bottle of Dr. Halpruner's Wonderful Pain Remover and inhaled the vapor of the medicine, and also took it internally mixed with milk, and began to improve at once, and within a few days was entirely cured.

"Since that time we keep this wonderful medicine in our house for it is a splendid family remedy, and use it for most everything. I would not be without a bottle of Dr. Halpruner's Pain Remover.

All druggists sell Dr. Halpruner's Pain Remover or send direct to Halpruner Med. Mfg. Co., 28 California St., S. F., Cal.

Cold in the head makes you snuffle—makes your head ache, your eyes water. Your throat is parched; you feel out of humor with yourself and every one else. You're cross and irritable—speak sharply and say things you did not intend to. You're miserable, but you think you cannot help it. But you can.

You can stop your cold in a jiffy. Go to the nearest druggist and get a bottle of Dr. Halpruner's Pain Remover; pour a few drops on your hands and hold them under your nostrils, inhaling the vapor. Do this for a few minutes and the relief is instantaneous. Keep it up and you will be cured.

It is also advisable to take a tablespoonful of the medicine in a glass of milk or water every hour or so until cured. All druggists sell Dr. Halpruner's Pain Remover—see and $1 a bottle. Don't let them talk you out of buying it—it is really a wonderful medicine that will cure your cold instantly; and what's the use of waiting and suffering if you can be cured at once? Demand the genuine. Halpruner Medical Manufacturing Co., 28 California St., San Francisco.

NEILL AND THE ELKS

Full Text of Actor's Letter About Them.

(Special to the Advertiser.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 15.—The row over his initiation into the order of Elks caused by James Neill, the well-known actor, is still a subject of interest in and out of the theatrical profession. It will be remembered that Mr. Neill, while being initiated into the Spokane lodge of Elks, tore off the bandages from his eyes, refusing to proceed with the ceremony, and left the lodge room declaring that his sense of self-respect barred him from further participation. I have written to the Advertiser some of the statements made by Mr. Neill, and am now able to give the full text of a letter written by him a few days after the row to his friend and attorney in Spokane. This lawyer is named Rockwell, and is himself an Elk. It was he who persuaded Neill to join the order, and who after Neill had withdrawn from the lodge room, begged him to allow him to settle the matter peacefully. The letter is as follows:

Mr. T. D. Rockwell attorney-at-law, Spokane, Wash.—My dear friend Rockwell: I have had time to think over and sleep over the events of Saturday afternoon, and I am conscientiously bound to withdraw the authority I gave you to attempt to patch up the difficulty. Reflection convinces me that my protest against personal indignity and coarse buffoonery was timely and entirely justifiable. For the first time in its history, a member of my family has received an insulting blow and been powerless to resent it. I am grateful to the young man who in discharge of his lofty functions, wielded the stick with which, while blindfolded, I was struck from behind at the moment of my first entrance into your inner sanctum, for his courtesy in afterwards apologizing to me in the ante-room. If your wish to compromise the matter had prevailed and I had been allowed, after my first exit in disgust, to re-enter the lodge room, I should have begged your officers to permit me to take any necessary obligation that would have made an Elk of me. But I should not have submitted in the second instance any more than the first to any personal indignity. I know that the word indignity you have protested against, but I have been so far unable to find a softer word to describe the infliction under the circumstances of a blow with a stuffed club. I congratulate myself that I was not intimidated into the customary cowardly submission to indignities, the first, and probably the mildest of which was sufficient to make me declare myself and withdraw.

"I wish you to bear in mind that you and other officers and members of your lodge, immediately prior to my entrance into the chamber of initiation, had assured me that no undue liberties would be attempted, that I would be treated as a serious minded gentleman, who had placed himself for initiation in the hands of other gentlemen. I assured you in the ante-room when I declined to remove part of my clothing as a prelude to adopting the highwayman's mask and night gown that is your custom for initiation, that I should resent any assault upon my person or any low buffoonery. It was only because of the solemn assurances I received that I permitted myself to be led blindfolded into your lodge room. The responsibility of my indignation and declaration and savage rebuke rests not with me.

"Permit me to say that I am convinced that when time and sober reason have removed the last vestige of the undignified and debasing practices that disgraced the order in its primitive days, and which have unfortunately survived in part until today, that I shall be asked again to present myself before your exalted ruler. Until then I prefer to preserve my personal dignity and American manliness. The flag that adorns your altar should be a platform upon which men and gentlemen may meet together in fond fellowship, in brotherly love and patriotic enthusiasm, and it ought not to be necessary for a candidate to wear a highwayman's mask and an old woman's night gown as a fitting garb in which to approach that altar.

"In your heart you know, as does every man who witnessed my foolish humiliation, that I was justified in my anger, and in the use of the caustic language I employed. I am bound to say in all sincerity that I believe that every man who wears an Elk's badge, if that badge was earned with the wages offered me, comes out from the ordeal less of a man than when he went in. No lodge could give enough to any man to make for what was lost in self-respect. These are my honest views, and I should stultify myself if I failed to disclose them. I was sincerely anxious to become an Elk. I had seen evidences of your splendid charities and beautiful benevolence, and I wished to affiliate myself with friends and brothers. I had no axe to grind. I came to you at the summit of my usefulness and success as a public entertainer. I had no need to study what I should get, my only thought was that I should find in the charity and benevolence of the Elks an avenue through which I might give some of the good in me. I have been disappointed, and it seems to me now that the only wise thing to do is to withdraw my application for membership, and thus let the matter drop. I cannot any more in September than now consent to be made a clown of in order to glut the coarser instincts of men, whom I believe, outside of this vaudeville department of your order, to be gentlemen and dignified citizens.

"I wish for no controversy, nor have I any desire for a quarrel with the Spokane lodge. It contains too many personal friends. I simply think you gentlemen are wrong in your attitude toward an initiate.

"You do not think yourselves seriously enough, nor perform the rites of initiation with dignity enough to invite into your ranks men of finer sensibilities.

"In asking for the withdrawal of my application I am keeping alive to the embarrassments of the situation. I have been elected and partly initiated. I have walked open-eyed among the paraphernalia of your work and have taken no obligation to maintain secrecy. However, if the matter is dropped and allowed to be forgotten, you may rely upon it that I need no oath to bind me to silence as to what I saw and heard, or I am ready now or when you will to take your serious work and obligations and become a member of your lodge. But it must be with my eyes open and under conditions that shall impress upon me the fact that I am being received into a dignified secret order.

"In conclusion, let me ask again that the members of your lodge preserve a discreet silence as to the circumstances of my partial initiation, as I shall. I have many friends who are Elks, the managers of nearly all the theaters where I appear are Elks, many Elks from time to time are employed in my company, my two partners in a business enterprise are Elks, and my interests are allied on every hand to the interests of your brother Elks. It would be unfair and unfortunate, therefore, that any controversy should arise or any thought of reprisal occur to me or to your lodge for the contretemps of last Saturday.

"For you, my dear old friend of thirty years, I assure you I entertain no other feeling but that of profound attachment and deep regard, and not the least of my regrets is that, as my proposer, you should have suffered any embarrassment.

"With sincere good wishes, I am, very cordially yours."

STORIES OF TILDEN.

Peculiarities of the Great Leader of the Democracy.

The great lawyer, great Democrat, and great man, Samuel J. Tilden, had a touch of humor, at times querulous in its tone, and at other times he could be funny without meaning to be. He was an expert judge of wines and his cellar was choicely stocked. When dining out, however, he had a little way of measuring by the taste of his guest and ordering accordingly. The late Col. John R. Fellows noted this trait, and once when dining with Mr. Tilden saw that as usual, the Sage of Greystone had ordered a small bottle of an ordinary brand for his plate and a very choice vintage for himself. Mr. Tilden was called away for a moment, and the colonel deftly shifted the bottles. When Tilden lifted his pint to pour out the wine, his eye quickly noted the difference, but he got out of the difficulty nicely. "Here, waiter," he said, "you have made a mistake in my wine. I want the same kind Colonel Fellows has."

A certain politician, still eminent but not refined, made Mr. Tilden a luncheon at his Gramercy park mansion. Tilden was particularly nice to him, the old gentleman got out a bottle of Johannisberger Schloss, the rarest of Rhine wines, and began to decant the contents into a minute glass, sniffing the savor of the juice and taking great pains to indicate that a treat was coming. A tray with some large glasses was at hand. The politician reached for one, and grasping the precious bottle by the neck, dumped half of the contents into it and drank it all at one gulp. Mr. Tilden eyed him malevolently and did not try to prolong the visit. When the door closed behind the guest, he said, with a snap:

"D—n him. The next time he comes I'll give him beer."

Mr. Tilden liked canvasback duck, and always instructed the chef at Cadie's how he wanted the bird cooked after personally selecting it. He had just got his bird before him one day, soon after the purchase of Greystone, when Conrad N. Jordan came in and said: "Mr. Tilden, I have an offer for Greystone. The party will give you $50,000 more than you paid for the property."

Mr. Tilden laid down his knife and fork and said in a tone of mild exasperation:

"Now, isn't that a shame! Why, I've just set out 100 peach trees."
